Collector to donate African artifacts

Pitt alumnus and Community College of Allegheny County professor Ralph Proctor, who is a nationally recognized collector of African art, talks about the eight artifacts he is donating to the African Heritage Nationality Room in the Cathedral of Learning on Wednesday. Proctor also announced that he will make an annual donation of African art to the African Heritage Classroom Committee in honor of Pitt history professor Laurence Glasco, who chaired the African Heritage Room’s design committee. This year, he said, that donation will be a Benin bronze casting of a head of a queen mother.
